BOOK SYNOPSIS

Lily must continue to play the game, and the stakes are even greater as it finally comes to a close. But when all is said and done, does she have the winning hand? She thought she was playing the Unseelie Court for her own ends; however, Lily was nothing but a pawn of the Seelie courtier, Cadowain. The fallout is devastating, but she can't afford to mourn for her mistakes. The most powerful weapon known to fay and men alike is on its way to the Seelie Queen, and the upcoming war is on Lily's head. Worse, she might not live long enough to regret it if the Unseelie Queen decides to judge her for her trickery before the battle is joined. Fay know no mercy, but they love their games. Lily is now the Herald, and her fate lies with the Wild Hunt. If she can master it, she might be able to outplay them all. The key is the Wild Horn. Troy, the Unseelie Trickster, is on her side. Marast, the Unseelie Hunter, is still under the compulsion that makes him protect her. But will they be enough to trick the Seelie Court and hunt down the Wild Horn before it is too late?
